BELGIUM MOURNS TRAGIC DEATH OF KING ALBERT I.

Communists Call a Series of Demonstrations Against Crown Prince Leopold

COUNTRY FACES TEST Is Without a Great Leader, Ruler, or Statesman

BRUSSELS, Feb. 19—(INS)—Little Belgium, the brave, torn by internal political strife at a time when all Europe seethes with unrest, stood united today in mourning the sudden, tragic death of her beloved King, Albert I.

With Belgian communists already calling a series of demonstrations against Crown Prince Leopold, who will be crowned King Leopold III on Friday, the little country faced a severe test of that fortitude which gave her eternal fame during the World War.

She was without a king. More important, however, was the fact she was without a great leader, a great ruler, and a great statesman, the one man in whom bickering politicians had placed faith that Belgium would emerge from her present troubles not too sorely tried.

King Albert, who personally led his countrymen in defense of Belgian boundaries against German armies, was the man most responsible for the country's place in history as "brave little Belgium."

Queen Elizabeth, of all her people, was called upon to be bravest. Seriously ill with influenza, she needed all her strength. She fainted when she was told of her husband's tragic death from a plunge into a ravine while enjoying his favorite sport of mountain climbing.

The body of the king lay in state at Laeken Palace, outside Brussels, with three court martial aides-de-camp watching over it.

The head was swathed in bandages, covering up the deep skull fracture wound which caused death.

The King's body tomorrow will be removed to Brussels Palace, where the public will be able to view it until Thursday, when a great state funeral will be held.

On Friday Leopold will take the oath of allegiance to the constitution and formally will succeed his father. Technically, in the meantime Belgium will have no monarch.

Crown Prince Leopold, Duke of Brabant, and Crown Princess Astrid, formerly of Sweden, arrived in Brussels last night after a hurried trip from Adelboden, Switzerland, where they had been skiing in the Alps.

The Crown Prince and Princess, after first visiting Queen Elizabeth, went to the death chamber in Laeken Palace. They knelt beside the bier in prayer before retiring for the night.

Principal members of royalty expected at Thursday's funeral were the Prince of Wales, Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, the Crown Prince of Sweden, Prince Nicholas of Rumania, president Albert Lebrun, of France, and Crown Prince Umberto of Italy.

BANQUET AND MINSTREL MARK 32ND ANNIVERSARY

Daughters of America, Council 58, Stage Enjoyable Program

200 PEOPLE ATTEND

The Daughters of America, Council 58, celebrated their 32nd anniversary Saturday evening by holding a banquet and entertainment in F. P. A. Hall. The affair was attended by approximately 200 people, including members and their families. It was a most enjoyable celebration and will linger long in the memories of those attending.

First, because Adolf Hitler was born in Braunaau on the Inn, and he never will rest until his Austrian homeland has become part of his, the third Reich.

Second, because it is probable that a majority of Austrians want to join the Reich, and the union would immediately increase the German population from sixty-five to seventy-two million and give the German army another army corps.

Third, because German possession of Austria would encircle Czechoslovakia. It would give Germany contact with Italy, and bring her within 100 miles of the Adriatic. It would give Germany contact with Hungary and enabling her to bring pressure on Rumania, would promise for the third Reich a path to the Black Sea, and thence to all the East, with fields for empire vast enough to sate the most imperial fancy.

Fourth, because it would expand the internal market of the Germans, bring some economic advantage, and divert attention from the necessarily slow

First, because it would be the first territorial change in the peace treaties, would serve as a precedent for further changes, and the mere bulk of a nation of 72,000,000 Nazi Germans would exercise an increased attractiveness for the other eight million Germans in Europe outside the Reich. It would bring the dream of Pan-Germany very near realization finally, because the possession of Austria would bring Erzberg within the German borders.

CADETS MAKE MERRY AT ANNUAL BANQUET

Frank Schremper, Wounded Veteran, Gives Inspiring Message

GIVES MERIT AWARDS

The event looked forward to by the American Legion Cadets for the past 365 days—the long awaited turkey dinner, initiation and entertainment—arrived Saturday evening. And a gala night it was! The bars were let down for this grand occasion of the year for the protégés of Robert W. Bracken Post, American Legion, and merriment with its accompanying laughter, whistles, jollification and noise in five feet of water.

William Shinn, who was an uncle to Norwood, was seven years old yesterday. With permission of their parents, the two boys went to the home of the Matthes lad, a cousin of William, and also an uncle of the other victim. Late in the afternoon the trio left the house and made their way to the canal about two blocks away. They are believed to have been sliding together on the ice when, weakened by the warm rays of the sun, it broke beneath them, plunging them into five feet of water.

Daniel Enion, 8-year-old son of Dr. and Mrs. George A. Enion, of 250 Washington street, and Joseph Geddes, Jr., 8 years old, of Wood street, who were gathering sticks in a nearby woods, heard calls for help and running to the canal bank they saw the Matthes child struggling in the water. They ran to the nearby home of William Bailey, on Phelps avenue, and gave an alarm.

The Cadets, Bristol's pride and joy—the ones who for the past two years have brought to this borough honor in the form of the state junior bugle corps championship, enjoyed a delectable menu in Zion Lutheran parish hall, heard inspiring addresses that urged them to continued success, witnessed a program of entertainment features, and then participated in the initiation of a group of candidates.

Honored by the presence of Frank Schremper, wounded veteran of the World War, a professor at the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, and a student of foreign countries, the lads were inspired with his message. Introduced as "a man who served his country with honor," by the toastmaster, L. Johnston Hetherington, Mr. Schremper prefaced his address by recounting his meeting with champions, people foremost in the world of sports, religion, aviation, etc. "And tonight I have the pleasure of meeting 125 champions, all at once, and that makes a big day for me."

The first president of the Andalusia Parent-Teacher Association was John Curtis, Mr. Curtis being chosen for this office when the said association had its inception on July 29, 1928.

The purpose of the association, is that of other like organizations, is to establish a closer relationship between the home and the school, and to promote child welfare in the home, the school, and the community.

Since the time it commenced functioning this association has been helpful in the following ways:

Provided toxin-antitoxin for school children; purchased school equipment such as pictures, library books, athletic equipment, etc.; helped to finance school operettas, and programs by the students, etc.; took an active part in welfare work in the community; sponsored the Boy Scout Troop and Cub Pack of Andalusia.

Then giving attention to the attainment of the state championship, the ex-service man said: "You boys from 10 to 18 years of age have put Bristol on the map. Your effort, work, and willingness to do things have made Bristol a champion town. There isn't a town in the United States but would be proud to have its boys chosen champions once. But you've done it twice. You've set the target high for others to aim at. Don't rest on your laurels. These men and women who are backing you expect you to keep on winning."

The blessing was asked by the Rev. Paul R. Ronge, pastor of Zion Church.

READY FOR WAR

In announcing openly that it is making preparations for possible war with Japan Russia gives another dangerous turn to the situation in the Far East.

The speech of Commissar Voroshilov before the Communist Congress fully confirms previous unofficial reports dealing with military measures being carried out in the maritime provinces. A new naval base has been established at Vladivostok, said the commissar, fully equipped with airplanes and submarines and prepared to resist any Japanese attack.

His statement can not be regarded as having been made in the nature of a bluff for the purpose of intimidating Japan. For three years or more, there have been reports that Russia was strengthening her defenses in the maritime provinces. These reports have been seized upon by Tokyo as justification for strengthening the Japanese army and navy and the carrying out of other military plans in what formerly was Manchuria.

Although each country claims that its war preparations were made only for defensive purposes, this can not serve to minimize the chances of war. The powder has been spread, and only a spark now is needed.

TURN TO AMERICA

In agreeing on President Roosevelt as arbiter in an effort to settle their century-old boundary dispute, Peru and Ecuador seem to reflect an improvement in the relations between the United States and Latin America.

The President is to be called on to decide the issue in the event two negotiating commissions being sent to Washington fail to reach a settlement.

The dispute had its inception in 1830 when Ecuador became a separate state. It relates to territory around the headwaters of the Amazon River, lying between the Morona, Marañon, Napo and Pilcomayo rivers. In 1910, the controversy was submitted to the king of Spain for arbitration. The Spanish ruler, however, withdrew without making an award. In 1924, a protocol was drawn up providing for the sending of commissions to Washington to discuss the adjustment of the dispute, and, in the event of disagreement, leaving to the American president arbitral decision of the points involved. Until recently, however, no action in carrying out the terms of the protocol had been taken.

Settlement of the dispute would cure a threatening situation in Latin America, and the part taken in it by the United States should help this country in that part of the world. This is sufficient reason for hoping for success of the latest move.

Moderns aren't so superior. Shakespeare wrote great stuff because he had audiences that liked it.

This kind of war isn't so bad. We aren't required to eat corn bread because our allies don't like it.

Mussolini's scowl is understandable. You would look that way if you had to kiss as many whiskers as he does.

It might be worse. Suppose some of our big industries couldn't pay dividends without selling three-inch guns to gangsters.

Echoes of The Past

By Louise White Watson

Voices

"Do we live forever?" And Echo answers, purposely omitting the "do" and unhesitatingly proclaims, "We live forever."

The Delaware

That river of dignity, enfolded in historic robes, proclaims authentically, "Never does the winter season bear down heavily on humanity in severity of cold, ice blocks, sometimes floating, sometimes firmly wedged together, but what Echo calls back clearly, and one again pictures the Battle of Trenton. One never recalls that battle but what Echo again and again presents most vividly the suffering incurred that victory was won."

Roof Trees

Shelters, built by man, these roofees stood for years upon years, offering shelter, dreaming dreams—who knows—of the day when historic echoes would claim a share of the homestead. Many of you recall the hip-roof house, at New Hope, known as "The Old Fort." The two windows on the third floor, one on the second, and one immediately below it, on the first. These windows allow for sunshine or shadow on the end, while in front are the two windows over a porch. In the roof, leaning closely to the second story windows, are two others. Echo goes just nestles there and has for years for this is said to be the second house built in that old borough of New Hope, and at one time headquarters of General Mercer and General de Forney, previous to the Battle of Trenton. One dare not rush by, there are too many vivid pictures of those old days to arrest one's attention, taking us with them down the long, long trail.

Over the River

Leaving Pennsylvania's markings, one crosses that historic river, the Delaware, and stands before another house wherein Echo finds herself at home. She calls out and we listen: "This is the Holcolm House, one of Lambertville's age-long touches. This was Washington's headquarters on two different occasions. His 'Coryell's Ferry' Orders and Letters were written from here." The old stone house, with water-pipe leading from roof to ground, seemingly forming the dividing line between two sections of the house, evidently built at different times. The tall trees, standing within the shelter of the white picket fence, allowing but a small space for a front yard. One tried to glimpse the back, knowing there must be space somewhere for the flowers, dear to all woman's heart. The old pump and trough just outside the fence. Can't you hear the head of the house, calling out justly, as he reigns the horse, after allowing him to drink freely of that cool, thirst-quenching water, some drops still clinging around the mouth, "Ready, Mother?" and hear her call briskly, "Coming, Father." Echo goes back into the large airy rooms and fury of the storm hurried the officers and men for orders had come for the attack on Trenton. Again one hears, "Their's not to make reply. Their's not to reason why."

Where Next?

Have we passed some wild cataract leaping in glory? for Echo has called and we follow her willingly, devotedly, for history is in the air. One breathes it in deeply and reverently. We call a cat at "Rolling Green." At Paxson's corner, now Aquetong, Bucks County, home of Benjamin Paxson in Revolutionary times, Echo points out to us an old pine tree, standing on the right of the lawn, with its center gone, evidence of the marksmanship of an officer of Washington's Army. This place is embedded in a grove of trees, the foreground showing part of the encampment site of General Charles Lee and Sir Brigade, June 29, 1778. Echo is speaking: "Many Revolutionary stories and traditions, handed down in the Paxson family, cluster around this old Colonial structure. One tells of a dinner in preparation one snowy Christmas eve Turkey roasting on the spit, cider mulling on the earth. "Then," and Echo hurries on, "there came a rap at the door, hurried words and marching orders given. Untouched was the dinner, warm fires deserted, out into the

"Only Pay Rolls Will Help Us"

Why Not An R. F. C. For Industry?

In bridging the way from Depression to Recovery, Uncle Sam has erected a fine structure with government loans.

But it will be impossible for the vast majority of Americans to cross this bridge into the promised land of prosperity until the draw shown in the cartoon is let down.

Failure to provide loans for Industry will hold up indefinitely the march out of the economic wilderness. Loans to banks, agriculture, insurance companies and railroads form but a part of the bridge—not by any means the whole bridge.

Industry is the real connecting link between the recovery machinery that already has been set up and actual recovery itself. Without industrial progress the program cannot proceed on its own, for industry provides the creative power—the one road to payrolls. Put men and women to work, give them an opportunity to earn wages, and recovery will follow automatically.

To do this, Industry needs the same kind of government assistance that already has been given to the banks, railroads, insurance companies and agriculture. It needs long term credit in the form of working capital loans.

Loans to banks to replace depreciations of securities, their inventories—save stockholders and depositors but remain a frozen unhuman something that weaves not, neither does it spin.

Loans to insurance companies save stockholders by replacing depreciations of their securities. The loans have not saved one policy for one poor person that had lost his job and couldn't pay his premiums.

Loans to railroads have saved bondholders, given some labor but have mainly been again to replace depreciation and save capital—investment—they have not made one more pound of freight to carry or created one dollar of wealth.

Loans to China, etc., may be helpful to take up the same answer—the same song over and over again.

Industry makes freight for railroads to carry—it makes necessary human travel—it pays wages so men and women can pay their insurance premiums and have money to deposit in banks.

When banks have deposits Insurance Companies are paid premiums and carriers have normal freight and passenger service. They need no loans.

All these things happen when Industry is able to employ labor and replace its working capital depleted by the self same depreciations that affected banks, insurance companies and railroads.

Don't Be FOXED when buying fuel

Play safe, order blue coal

It's easy to be fooled when buying fuel. Especially if you listen to the extravagant claims made for substitute fuels. Thousands of home owners who've tried them tell the same story...spotty, irregular heat—constant running to the cellar—unhealthy fumes—and higher heating costs. Don't be "foxed" when selecting fuel to heat your home. Insist on "blue coal".

"blue coal" is the highest quality Northern Pennsylvania hard coal. It is carefully cleaned, sized and prepared to give more quick-starting, steady, healthful heat for every fuel dollar.

HIBERNIANS DROP ANOTHER CAGE TILT

The Bristol Hibernians dropped another decision yesterday afternoon, losing to the Kent Tigers, 31-19, on the Italian Mutual Aid floor. In the preliminary game, the Bristol Hawks went out of thirteen foul tries, while the losers scored but five in seventeen tries.

The Hibs were no match for the Trenton team whose passing and scoring attack was much more superior than the locals. The only period in which the Big Green showed any scoring punch was in the third quarter when it chalked up seven points.

Europe Is In Uniform

Erzberg is named last, but it is not least in the list of reasons why Germany wants Austria. Germany today must import three-quarters of her iron ore.

The treaty of Versailles took away three-fourths of her iron ore deposits. When Germany lost the iron fields of Alsace-Lorraine and Luxembourg and, at least temporarily, the Saar, she suffered the severest of all the blows at her war-making capacity.

At peace, Germany, as her 1927 record showed, can import enough iron ore to satisfy the wartime needs of 1917.

From Spain, Sweden, Algiers, she can import all she needs to prepare for anything she likes. She can lay in vast supplies of ore, as she is now doing under long term contracts with Sweden. But when war comes Germany, with no command of the seas, is dependent on the ore within her borders.

The German steel trust already owns Erzberg. But Germany wants Erzberg within her borders.

No many visitors to Austria take the trouble to explore this Alpine factor in international politics. The train leaves Vienna at ten o'clock in the evening and at two o'clock in the morning reaches Leoben. There an excellent hotel, used by the directors of the mighty Alpine-Montan Gesellschaft, present owners of Erzberg, province, provides a bed until daybreak. At the crack of a freezing dawn the mixed train for Erzberg starts and with half a dozen high-booted mountaineer passengers puffs off for a climb of three thousand feet.

The conductor said we would never get there; an avalanche had blocked the tracks. Punctually at nine-thirty we confused the defeatist spirit of the train crew and pulled into Erzberg. Like gnomes, we dived into the mountain, walked down a tunnel through its heart, and came out on its massive breast.

There lay Erzberg, above and below us, a perfect stairway to take a giant in sixty steps of fifty feet each from the bottom to the top. Out of the tip of the mountain a hundred Cheops Pyramids could be built. Each step was brown, or red, or yellow, and the top of each was frosted. Behind the mountain the blue Alpine sky glittered fiercely in the cold sunshine. Each step has its name. There are Adam, and Eve, and Judas, and Paul and Joseph, and Kunigunde. Every minor knew the sixty-steps as other men knew street names.

Romans were the first to pick at Erzberg. They picked a century to gain a ton. Today when the mines are going top speed air drills on every step bite deep. The web of wire that shrouds the mountain carries at one time the spark to 300 blasts and in one mighty roar a ton of dynamite flies another layer of the monster's hide. For minutes the echoes bellow up and down the valley.

"It is marvelous to hear," our guide remarked. "Sometimes we have war veterans here, and they always say it reminds them of the biggest bombardments they ever heard at the front."

From one day's blasting at this rate the mines gain 6,000 tons or more of ore that runs better than fifty per cent pure iron. In its best year, 1915, Erzberg produced 2,260,000 tons. In 1933 production went down to 270,000 tons. This year Alpine-Montan expects to do 400,000 or about the 1931 level.

Germany of course requires more ore than Alpine-Montan's present or past production. At present the sales to Germany are severely handicapped by freights to the Ruhr. But Alpine-Montan needs German coke, and the same cars can take coke to Erzberg and iron ore back to the Ruhr. This is a possibility for peacetime trade between Germany and Austria and is an example of the sort of economic advantage that could result to the two countries from political union.

But Germany is more interested in Erzberg's capacity. Even though it would not supply all of Germany's needs in time of war it could supply an important part of them. The 300,000 tons of ore in Erzberg equal about a fourth of the total ore supply that Germany has left to her after losing the French fields. And the convenience of the Erzberg supply, lying on the surface with room for ten thousand men to shovel it away, is unequalled in Europe.

It seems possible that the former maximum yearly production of 2,260,000 tons could be tripled or quadrupled if need existed, and that would mean that Erzberg in wartime could supply Germany with forty to fifty per cent of the ore she lacks.

Even when Germany had the ore fields that now belong to France, she appreciated the importance of Erzberg. Erzberg's guest book shows it. This guest book of an iron mine has history and romance in its faded leaves. First name in it, written forty years ago is Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir to the Austro-Hungarian throne, whose assassination twenty-one years after he visited Erzberg, was the signal for the World War.

In 1916 appear the names of German officers come to arrange delivery of ore to war-hungry furnaces. Again and again appear the names of commissioners from the Berlin Ministry dependent on the ore within her borders.

The German steel trust already owns Erzberg. But Germany wants Erzberg within her borders.

of War.

The conductor said we would never get there; an avalanche had blocked the tracks. Punctually at nine-thirty we confused the defeatist spirit of the train crew and pulled into Erzberg. Like gnomes, we dived into the mountain, walked down a tunnel through its heart, and came out on its massive breast.

After the war comes Castillo Castiglioni, the great Italian inflation profiteer who made and lost a major fortune in the wreck of currencies. Erzberg was for a while in Castiglioni's hands. Then comes the name of Hugo Stinnes, who picked up Erzberg as an item in his fantastic inventory. Then Zimmermann, the commissioner of the League of Nations to Austria. Finally Voegler, German iron master whose steel trust now owns Erzberg through Alpine-Montan.

After war broke, a long and ominous blank in the guest book reflects the shock that stunned Europe. A full year after August 1914 the first guests to sign again were five little archduchesses with their mamma. After the war ended came another long blank. And then the first guests to sign again were the three little children of Skoda, lord of munitions.

Munitions families can still afford a trip to Erzberg.

Those receiving merit stars from their commander as a reward for hygiene, obedience, scholarship, initiative, appearance, were: Drum major Bolton; cadets Francesini, Harkins, Heath, Kelly, Louder, Magro, Manchiney, McCafferty, McElroy, Mulholand, Ross, Robertson, Simoyer, Sagolla, Sabatini, Betz, Gallagher; corporals, Jeffries; sergeants Maberry and Poane, and corporal Pfeifer.

Stripes were awarded to: Corporal Francesini; sergeants Pfeifer and Sabatini; corporal Mancini; color sergeants Wicher, Fenton and Cole; corporal Riley; cadets Riley, A. Rago, Rossi, Robertson, Simoyer, Sagolla, Sabatini, Betz, Gallagher; corporals, Bachelder and Cuthinian.

Two were honorably discharged from the corps, they having reached the age limit. These were Wayne Stake and William Halpin.

Mr. Hetherington announced that the Cadet Corps is now open for enlisting. Boys who have attained their 10th birthday are eligible. A request was made that those applying for membership be accompanied to the corps meetings by one of their parents.

An entertainment which followed the dinner and speeches, included two performers, one sleight-of-hand artist, and a ventriloquist.

Initiation climaxed the evening. About 20 were eligible for initiation with eight being chosen to represent this group.

The menu served by women of the Zion Church included: Fruit cup, turkey, dressing, gravy, mashed potatoes, peas, cranberries, celery, rolls, butter, coffee, ice cream, small cakes, mints. Favors were paper hats, balloons and noise makers.

Cadets Make Merry At Annual Banquet

One of the speakers was Leon Wall, of Royersford, known to hundreds of ex-service men as commander of the Ninth District of the American Legion.

"It's a pleasure for me to be here and enjoy the fruits of your labors," stated Commander Walt.

"If we're proud of nothing else we're proud to have in our district for two years in succession the champion cadet corps of the state. The post is in back of you, the district is in back of you . . . As long as I'm district commander, and as long as you are state champions you will always have the line of any parade the ninth district has in charge. Carry on."

To the Cadet Commander, Harry Burbank, a gift was presented by Joseph Winslow, Lieutenant commander, on behalf of the cadet corps. A splendid ovation was paid by the lads to their leader as he received his gift, and the respect and love for Commander Burbank shown in the eager faces. A gift was also presented by the corps through Mr. Winslow to Lieutenant commander Herbert Thomas.

The toastmaster presented to the assemblage: Mrs. Walter Strouse, president of the Cadet Booster Association; Lt. Com. Thomas; Mrs. Benjamin Ahart, president of the American Legion Auxiliary of Bracken Post; musical leader, Charles Brodie. To the latter Mr. Burbank gave a baton.

As is the custom the cadet of merit for the year was named. The lad thus honored was Sergeant Jeffries, who received this award by being picked by the officers because of initiative, scholarship, willingness, obedience, leadership, hygiene, attendance, appearance, no suspensions, and no reprimands, this being summed up by Commander Burbank as "being a gentleman."
